EDITO

The Greek people have expressed their disapproval of the austerity, imposed by the Troika more than once. In January 2015 by electing Syriza, a week ago at the referendum and also, in May 2012 when the European powers fearing a Syriza victory and its anti-austerity programme, threatened the Greeks with dire consequences.

In spite of a total rejection of the devastating policies imposed on Greece for the last 5 years, an accord that protracts the damage to the Greek state and will further impoverish the population, was signed on Monday, July 13 at the Eurozone heads of state meeting. During the night from 15th to 16th July, the agreement was adopted by the Greek Parliament thanks to the support of three right wing parties (PASOK, Potami, New Democracy) that voted with Tsipras while 32 Syriza MPs voted against and 7 abstained.

The creditors made Alexis Tsipras yield exploiting the menace of the Grexit. This has also created terrible disillusionment within the Greek people and movements struggling for social justice and respect of rights.

We publish the speech of Zoé Konstantopoulou where she explains her refusal to accept this “accord”. The support and solidarity for the Greeks is of paramount importance in these troubled days in Europe.

There are alternatives to this false dilemma between the humiliating austerity and the Grexit, imposed on Greece.

Along with the suspension of payment of the illegitimate, illegal, odious and unsustainable debt, Eric Toussaint in his article "Greece: Alternatives to the Capitulation" proposes several measures to be urgently adopted in order to genuinely defy the creditors.

Contrary to the widespread claim that suspending payment would result in exiting the euro, it would have been possible to stay in the Euro if a series of sovereign measures of self-defense and economic recovery such as a strict control on banks, currency, and taxation had been implemented. It would have been perfectly possible to eschew the ECB's, the Eurogroup's and the EC's unacceptable and illegitimate injunctions. The Tsipras government decided otherwise, and this has led to a tragic subordination to EU supervision, to more austerity and to the selling off of the Greek national heritage.

After the Greek Parliament adopted the disastrous agreement, an alternative must include the possibility of voluntarily exiting the Euro Zone if the Greek people support this prospect. This option is comforted by the Greek Parliament's capitulation on July 16th and by the very content of the agreement. Moreover the Greek people will soon understand that if they want a future that includes justice and emancipation, Greece must get out of the euro zone.

SPECIAL GREECE

More than five months after the victory of Syriza in parliamentary elections in Greece, creditors continue to put pressure on the government. The “institutions” tirelessly seek to impose on Greece the continuation of the memoranda conditions, the very same that has led Greece into an unprecedented humanitarian, social, economic and political crisis. The preliminary report of the debt truth committee has shown the, almost entirely, illegitimate, illegal, odious and unsustainable nature of the debt. Faced with the intransigence of the institution's" proposals, Alexis Tsipras has announced that (...)
