

What a contrast could be seen this week: at the World Social Forum in Belem, where I was, 120,000 people from all continents were proclaiming that another world is not only possible but necessary; whereas at European level and in the Northern hemisphere, debates on how to solve national issues were omnipresent. This revival of protectionism in countries inside and outside of Europe, concerning national labour markets for example, is a dangerous reaction, one which is unacceptable for progressive forces! There is, of course, a need to protect and create jobs and employment, but not by discriminating against people coming from other EU or third countries. Read more..

EMPLOYERS' SANCTIONS DIRECTIVE: MIGRANT WORKERS, NOT EMPLOYERS, WILL PAY THE PRICE OF THEIR EXPLOITATION

On the 4 February, the European Parliament voted in favour of a report by Claudio Fava MEP (PES) on EU legislation aiming to introduce sanctions for employers of irregular third country nationals. SOLIDAR along with the European Network Against Racism (ENAR), European Women's Lobby (EWL) and Platform for International Cooperation on Undocumented Migrants (PICUM) issued a joint statement.

The statement put forward that although we have been encouraged to see the high priority given by the European Parliament to addressing the exploitation of migrant workers, we are also disappointed that a compromise has been reached by the EU Council and MEPs that retains the focus on the status of the migrant, rather than the exploitation by the employer. While welcoming key protective provisions, we are concerned that this directive does not recognise that undocumented workers have labour rights and that the priority must be ensuring such rights are enforced.

INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION

WESTERN BALKANS: 18 CIVIL SOCIETY RECOMMENDATIONS

At a seminar organised by Olof Palme International Center and SOLIDAR on 15-17 December in Kolacin, Montenegro, 50 civil society organisations (CSOs) drafted 18 Recommendations for the European Commission (EC) in order to strengthen their role in the European Enlargement process.

The CSOs consider that a legally recognised status of Civil Society Organisations in the Western Balkans and a culture change amongst decision makers towards a more 'open understanding' of the social economic value of CSOs, is a precondition. Furthermore, it was suggested that the EC could support the set up of 'social observatories' by CSOs and trade unions that fulfil a "watchdog" role for decent work, social inclusion, social cohesion, social services, social protection and poverty eradication.

EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT VOTES ON EPAs

The European Parliament adopted today (5 February) a controversial report on Economic Partnership Agreements (EPAs), drafted by Jürgen Schröder (EPP-ED, DE), which states that whether countries in the Africa, Caribbean and Pacific group sign Economic Partnership Agreements with the EU or not, they should not be worse off than under the current system of preferences.
