Onderwerp: SOLIDAR Weekly Round Up 04-02-2011

As the European Parliament debates the Single Permit which will worsen segregation and inequality between workers; as the people in Tunisia, Egypt (read updates from CTUWS) and other Arab countries challenge their despotic leaders and fight for democracy and human rights; we head for the next World Social Forum (WSF) in Dakar (see our programme below).

The WSF brings together a huge community of "altermondialistes", radicals, humanists, democrats and progressives. There is a need and there is a message: the need is to federate progressive forces and to build bridges between the world of work and civil society, between progressives of different kinds in order to prepare progressive majorities for the future which will open the way for a real change.

Although the crisis is systemic and results from uncontrolled speculation, we observe that the tendency - not only in Europe - is that financial markets and the conservatives want to continue following these uncontrolled markets and speculation. The WSF offers us a message that another world is still possible and that workers and the people are not there to pay the price for a crisis which they are not responsible for.
