SOLIDAR Weekly Round Up 21-11-2014

Editorial by Conny Reuter, SOLIDAR Secretary General

A New Thrill: Investment

21 November 2014

When Commission President Juncker addressed the European Parliament prior to his election he put forward the idea of an investment programme of 300 billion euro. Too ambitious or too modest? At least it is a clear sign of possible policy change! Until now the orthodoxy of “sound public finances” and the “black zero” have been the overall objective. This mantra was not questioned and always presented as though there was no alternative. In response, progressives have consistently called for a balanced policy that includes investment and does not kill the investment capacity of Member States even those under the Troika rules. The unilateral focus on financial and fiscal consolidation has produced unprecedented social imbalances in and between the Member States, as the Employment and Social Developments in Europe (ESDE) review has shown in the last three years.

Now there seems to be a new momentum: the investment programme for which progressives have always called for, even before Mr. Juncker became the leading candidate of his political family. There are two questions: where shall the money come from and where shall it go to? Progressive economists have provided enough proof that public investment is more sustainable than short term private investments. Therefore, there should be a central role for the European Investment Bank for binding private investment into public investment and increasing its fiscal capacity. Another source of revenue should come from tax justice by closing tax havens and ending tax competition between Member States and by doing so stop tax evasion and tax fraud. Unfeasible? No, just a matter of political will!

And where shall the investment go to? As social NGOs that have argued since the beginning of the financial and economic crisis for social consolidation, we call for investment in education and social infrastructure. The social economy is based on a public-private-partnership model, and has a significant financial and social return on investment. We are convinced that our progressive allies in the EP will take this position into consideration, which will make a difference and give the investment programme the social dimension it needs.

Instead of looking to the unspent areas of the European Social Funds, meaningful thought should be given to new sustainable financial tools and instruments such as social project bonds.

After the promises, it is time to deliver and to make a difference on the social front!

Publication: The Social Dimension of EU Enlargement

In 2012 the European Union Resolution on Enlargement expressed concerns about the lack of attention to the social dimension of the EU enlargement process. Indeed in recent years, unemployment and social inequalities have significantly increased in the Western Balkans affecting in particular the situation of young people and demonstrating that the socio-economic dimension cannot be separated from the political one. This FEPS and SOLIDAR publication is a collection of expert articles presenting an overview of the current challenges in consolidating the social dimension of EU enlargement in the Western Balkans.

Briefing 68: Supporting Social Investment in the Western Balkans: European Enlargement Monitoring Report 2014

This briefing contains policy recommendations on how to foster social inclusion and support social investment in the Western Balkans region. These recommendations have been designed in response to the European Commission's Progress Reports on the Enlargement Strategy and Main Challenges 2014 – 2015, published on October 8.

Enforceable labour and social standards in TTIP

17 November 2014

Last Wednesday 12 November, SOLIDAR took part in the EESC conference on Sustainable Development in the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (TTIP). During the session 'Participative Mechanisms in TTIP' SOLIDAR called upon the negotiators to take a second look at the Trade and Sustainable Development chapter of TTIP to make labour and social standards enforceable; for instance by including a dispute settlement and sanctioning mechanism on the basis of all ILO Conventions and in particular the ILO Recommendation 202 on social protection. To promote democracy and transparency, SOLIDAR called in particular for the European Parliament to hold an open and transparent mid-term assessment of the TTIP negotiations providing a better, stronger, political mandate for the Commission negotiators. The speaking notes can be read here.

SOLIDAR Report monitoring ENP Progress in Palestine

21 November 2014

After Sweden officially recognised the State of Palestine on 30 October, in an important move that confirms the Palestinians' right to self-determination, last week Spanish MPs overwhelmingly adopted a motion calling on their government to recognise a Palestinian state, echoing similar votes last month in Britain and Ireland.

SOLIDAR's member, El Movimiento por La Paz (MPDL) that has been working in Palestine for 19 years, with extensive in-field knowledge of the political and socio-economic context of the country, has positively welcomed the initiative of the recognition of a Palestinian state.

Members News

ASB, AWO and Volkshilfe Austria opened their European Office on 18 November 2014 in the premises of SOLIDAR in Brussels with the objective of further engaging with discussions on the EU-level and strengthening cooperation with EU-policy makers. This special occasion has been summarised in a press release which you can find here.

SOLIDAR Member CONCORD launched its annual Aidwatch report on 20 November 2014 at the OECD in Paris. For more information click here.

Partners News

SOLIDAR partner EASPD has sent out a press release on the unacceptable living conditions of persons with disabilities in Greece. This situation highlights yet again the importance of having sufficient and skilled professionals in the sector and the need for a solution to be put forward at the European level in view of the repeated occurrence of such human rights scandals in many European Member States. It is clearly a European problem, and the EU must therefore act and help Member States do better in this area. You can read the full press release here.

More News

On 19 November the S&D Group and Caritas Europe organised a conference titled 'Which Welfare for Europe? Can we still meet the EU2020 Social Objectives?' in the European Parliament in Brussels. SOLIDAR Secretary General, Conny Reuter, appeared as one of the speakers during this event, calling for the reinforcement of universal and comprehensive social protection systems. Preventive measures are a fundamental component of a social investment perspective. Providing people with adequate support to participate in society and respond to risks is a way to empower them, to make them more resilient and to prevent them falling into social exclusion and inactivity. More effort should be made to promote this logic at Member States' level and the Europe 2020 Strategy represents an excellent framework for it. Conference - The Ingredients for an Inclusive Jobs, Growth and Investment Agenda

Tuesday 2 December | 10:00 – 19:30

SOLIDAR works for a more social Europe. Against the background of our European social fabric which has been seriously damaged by the economic crisis and by the effects of one-sided austerity policies, SOLIDAR advocates for a policy change that puts social consolidation back at the heart of EU policies. The mid-term review of the EU2020 strategy provides a new momentum for this.

This one day event titled 'The Ingredients for an Inclusive Jobs, Growth and Investment Agenda' offers three roundtable debates covering the key ingredients expressing our vision for a more inclusive jobs, growth and investment agenda. We consider investment to be essential for social progress and lifelong learning in order for Europe to move beyond its current 'damaged' state.

The first debate will present policy proposals to realise a more inclusive, equal and cohesive Europe. The second debate, organised in cooperation with Policy Network, covers the impact of the 2008 financial crash on European social and national welfare policies. The day will close with a debate on the role of education and lifelong learning to accomplish a participatory and equal society.
