Dear Supporter,

Every day I make difficult decisions on how to spend our supporters' contributions to ensure my staff is able to defend human rights around the world.

Each day our researchers work—often in the face of extreme pressure and retaliation—to protect the lives of those who suffer human rights abuse. Their work threatens powerful people who perpetrate rights violations, so we must take every precaution to keep them safe as they investigate abuses on the ground. But we can't do it without you.

Help protect our researchers so they can continue to amplify the voices and defend the fundamental rights of those who need it most.

The young gay man in Jamaica who wants to feel safe as he walks down the street... The local rights activist who should enjoy the space to work and speak freely... The nine-year-old child bride in Tanzania who longs to attend school to pursue her dreams... These are the kinds of people that Human Rights Watch researchers fight for every day.

Help us keep our researchers safe so they can continue their vital work to protect human rights.

We can't do it without you. Give today.

Thank you,
